

In the manuscript “Effect of comfort theory-based nursing care on pain and comfort in women undergoing hysterosalpingography: a randomized controlled trial”, <https://doi.org/10.1590/1806-9282.20230798>, published in the Rev Assoc Med Bras. 2023;69(12):e20230798:

On page 3, 1nd column, 4th paragraph:

Where it reads:

Kolcaba developed Glasgow Coma Scale (GCS) in 1992 to determine individuals’ comfort requirements and evaluate nursing interventions providing and improving patient comfort¹⁹.

It should read:

Kolcaba developed General Comfort Scale (GCS) in 1992 to determine individuals’ comfort requirements and evaluate nursing interventions providing and improving patient comfort¹⁹.

On page 5, Table 3, 1nd column, 1th line:

Where it reads:

Glasgow Coma Scale

It should read:

General Comfort Scale

